

Peltophryne lemur

Puerto Rican crested toad

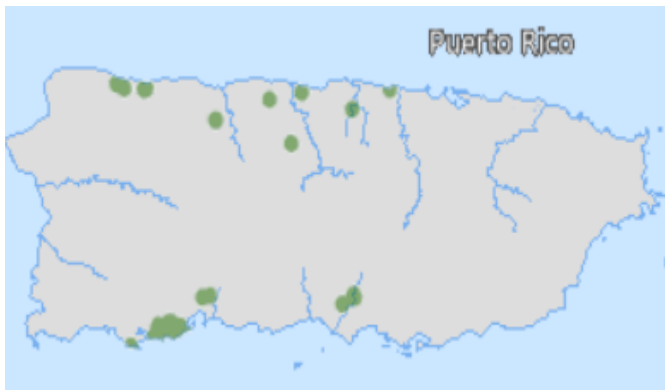

Family (Bufonidae)

Kingdom (Animalia)

Status (Threatened)

Description

Medium-sized toad with bony crests on its head and large metallic golden eyes. Its skin is rough, covered with warts and tubercles, with well-developed parotoid glands behind the eyes. It has a short, flattened snout and relatively short limbs with partially webbed toes.

Location/Habitat

It is found in lowland areas (below 200 m), mainly in arid or semi-arid rocky regions with fissures and limestone cavities in well-drained soils; occasionally in grassy fields.